INHARMONIOUS DEMOCRACY.

House Majority Cannot Agree on a Code Rules-Side Thrusts by Republicans. WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The Democrats of the House of Representatives have found it necessary to appeal to caucus decree in order to secure unity of action in the adoption of rules for the government of the proceedings of the House. It is a matter of some significance that the subject of dissension in the Democratic ranks is that clause of the proposed code which enables the committee on rules at any time to call up for consideration a report of that committee and preventing dilatory motions being made pending such consideration. To give the Speaker power to recognize and to prevent dilatory motions at such particular time and not clothe him with like power at all other times seems to many Democratic members a great discrimination in favor of the committee of which the Speaker is ex officio chairman and whose deliberations he naturally directs, and the proposed rule was most bitterly attacked by various members of the dominant party. So little, however, was the attention paid to party lines during the debate that one of the strongest supporter of the rule was Hon. James Buchanan, the well-known Republican Representative from New Jersey. The discussion began on the pending amendment offered by Mr. Hemphill of South Carolina, withdrawing from the jurisdiction of the appropriations committee the appropriations for the support of the District of Columbia. In speaking of the District of Columbia. In speaking of this amendment, Mr. Blount of Georgia, who had many years' experience as chairman and member of the committee on post-offices and post-roads, replied to some remarks previously made by Mr. Holman of Indiana, reflecting upon the increase in the expenditures for the postal service. Mr. Blount denied that there had been any extravagance in that service. The increase of appropriations had grown out of the prosperity of the Republic. [Applause.]

Mr. Sayers of Texas was opposed to Mr. Hemphill's proposition and contended that it was in the interest of good government and public economy that the expenditures for the District should remain under the control of the appropriations committee. While Mr. Sayers was speaking he was frequently interrupted by Mr. Hemphill and Mr. Heard of Missouri, but there was so much confusion in the hall that their voices did not reach the distance of ten yards. In vain did the Speaker appeal for the restoration of order. He was finally compelled to call upon the Sergeant-atarms to aid in the preservation of some de-gree of quiet. Mr. Hemphill, in advocat-ing his amendment, criticised the committee on appropriations for endeavoring to hold on to everything it could get, and ridiculed the idea of economy entertained by some people, which consisted in taking money from the people and keeping it as long as they could. After some further debate the amendment was rejected. MORSE STARTS A POLITICAL DEBATE. In speaking to an informal amendment,

Mr. Morse turned his attention to Massachusetta politics. That State was represented in the house to-day by five Republicans and seven Democrats. The Deniocratic members were all gentlemen of high ability. Massachusetts sent no other men here. [Laughter.] He had not a word to truth compelled him to say that Massachusetts was at present misrepresented on this floor. Governor Russell had been reelected for three reasons—first, his personal popularity; second, Prohibition vote; third, because he denied on the stump every Democratic doctrine.

Mr. Butler of Iowa said that there was a circus in town. The grand royal combination, the great and only monopolistic ag-gregation, the allied union of protective operatives had sounded its fish horn, declaring its grand opening, with more pharisees to the dozen than ever sent forth their praises in the streets of the old Jerusalem. [Laughter.] And such men to speak about the duties of true statesmanship! The Republicans claimed that they alone were patriots, when their every act of legislation relative to foreign countries had been an insult to the American flag. They had compared our country with other nations, and for shame had declared our mability to compete with them in the ordmary af-

Mr. DeForest of Connecticut inveighed against the rules of the last Congress and the decisions made under them, and approved of the proposed code. Branching off to a short discussion of the silver question, he declared that if a free-coinage bill was passed by this Congress it would not go out with the stamp of indorsement of the Democratic party upon it.

Mr. Dingley of Maine said that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Springer], in a speech delivered in New York, had declared that this House would not pass a free silver bill. He also understood that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Lanham] had withdrawn his amendment giving the committee on coinage, weights and measures leave to report at any time, on the assurance of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Bland] that it was unnecessary. There seemed to be some misunderstanding some-where, and he wished to call the attention of the gentieman from Illinois to the mat-

Mr. Springer-I did not make the statement that this House would not pass a free Mr. Dingley-I understood the gentleman to be so reported. Will the gentleman please state what he did say? Mr. Springer-I said that a free comage ill would not become a law, because your

President would veto it. Mr. Hooker of Mississippi moved to strike from the rules the provision making it always in order to call up for consideration a report from the committee on rules and preventing dilatory motions being made pending such consideration. Mr. Springer of Illinois earnestly opposed the motion, and gave his hearty approval to the rule reported by the committee on rules. This House was here to do business, and though he was an advocate of the rights of the minority he was not in favor of giving a dangerous power to one man who, by recourse to rules and by filibus-

Mr. Bailey of Texas, the youngest member of the House, and who came to Washington with quite a reputation for oratory. then took the floor, and he fully justified that reputation. He has a commanding presence, a handsome, clear-cut face, a powerful voice and a graceful delivery. The greatest attention was paid to his remarks, which were directed to an advocacy of Mr. Hooker's motion. He opposed the rule as reported, because it was an essential departure from the traditions of the Democratic party-a departure which he was unwilling to see become the law of the House except over his respectful protest. The American people were to-day living under a surveillance unknown to the Constitution, because they were living under a system of committee government. The proposed rule gave to the majority of the triumvirate of the committee on rules the power to decide what affirmative action should be taken by the entire House. Such a power ought not to be delegated except in cases of absolute and pressing necessity. The Democrats had a majority of twothirds, and with that majority it could safely and properly suspend all rules, should necessity require it. If the Democrats adopted this rule they were estopped hereafter from criticising the Fifty-first Congress and the distinguished gentleman who presided over its deliberations. [Applause on the Republican side.

Mr. Enloe of Tennessee preferred that lated by a committee on order of business. but if that could not be done he was in favor of the proposed rule. The rules of the Fiftieth Congress were do-nothing There was something good in the rules of the Fifty-first Congress. [Applause and laughter. | There was a lot of bad in them, too; but he wanted to profit by experience and incorporate what was good in the rules of the Fifty-first Congress in the code that would govern the Fifty-

some and useless.

Mr. Breckinridge of Kentucky thought that all the talk about the filibuster amounted to nothing but a scare-crow. As a rule, the filibuster was a first-rate fellow. Fifteen years ago he had prevented the force bill from being put upon the South. [This allusion to Mr. Randall was greeted with applause. The filibuster had defeated the educational bill. It was not true that the filibuster was entirely to be cut. It was well, sometimes, to be on good

Mr. Oates offered an amendment, providing for the appointment of a committee on order of business, to consist of fifteen members-ten Democrats and five opposition —which should have leave to report at any time and of which the Speaker shall be exofficio chairman.

Mr. Cockran of New York said that if a majority could not absolutely control a representative body then parliamentary institutions were without excuse for their existence.

After further debate, but without action, the House adjourned until to-morrow. During the debate on the contested rule several of the Democratic leaders had held an informal conference and discussed the wisdom of calling a party caucus to secure unity of action among the Democratic members. It was finally decided that such a course was imperative, and immediately after adjournment the caucus was announced for to-morrow evening, at 7:30

WAR ON THE PINKERTONS. Farmers' Alliance Representatives Want the House to Investigate, But It Will Not. WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The Farmers' Alliance sounded the war-cry against the Pinkertons to-day. They demanded that this detective agency, whose operations extend through every great commercial center and whose raminications include every important city of the country, be thoroughly investigated by the House of Representatives and that legislation be enacted to suppress the abuses alleged to be practiced by this quasi-militia organization. Some days ago Representative Watson, the Farmers' Alliance member from Georgia, presented a resolution instructing the committee on judiciary to "investigate as quickly and as fully as possible the charter, by-laws, rules and regulations of he finkerion Detective Agency, its ization, forces, purposes, methods and operations, and report to the House the methods of that agency, the number of armed men it can utilize in carrying out its purposes, the manner in which these armed men so employed are under the control or influence of the capitalists, and, therefore, acting as the militia of those capitalists to carry out their private aims regardless of what may be the merits of the dispute with the laborers." The resolution further directed the committee to report whether the Pinkerton agency is not practically irresponsible for acts of personal violence which may be committed by its hirelings and whether the State courts are not virtually without power to identify, arrest, convict and punish such non-resident criminals, and also, whether the charter and operations of that agency are not a violation of the rules of the United States.

"It is our intention," said Mr. Watson to a reporter to-day. "to push this thing to the bitter end. This resolution is a party measure with the Farmers' Alliance Representatives. We think that for the coporations to arm and equip a standing army to settle their difficulties with their laborers by war is reducing the government to say against any of these gentlemen, but | anarchy. The laborers have no right to maintain a standing army to fight the corporations, and the corporations should have no right to maintain a standing army to fight the laborers. If the government is not strong enough to deal with these people and settle their disputes from a government stand-point, then there is an end of the rule of the law and the beginning of the rule of that party which can equip the heaviest battalions. The Pinkerton detective agencies, viewed in the light of their actual practices, are but a standing militia, subject to the beck and call of the capitalists. They carry out the orders of the capitalists, no matter to what bloodshed those orders may lead, and they do it totally irrespective of the rights of the other party. If armed intervention is to come at all it should come from the army of an impartial magistrate, State or federal, which recognizes that there are two sides to all labor questions, and that the rights of both are to be considered. We want to serve notice to the House and the committee on judiciary that we expect action in this matter, and will protest against unreasonable delay either in committee or in the House." Representative Simpson of Kansans, for the Farmers' Alliance of the West, expressed the same sentiments as Representative Watson of Georgia. "One of our strong fights in this Congress," said he, "is to be made upon the principle embodied in that resolution. There are thirty thousand men in the United States, in the employ of the Pinkertons, who may be mobilized at any city. They can shoot down the citiparty is at once spirited away by his fellows without any show of justice. That has been many times done in the past. The existence of the Pinkerton organization is a constant menace to the interests of labor and the freedom of the peo-ple, and, if unchecked, will finally result in the establishment of a private army to be used in the interest of monopoly. The practice can be carried far enough to destroy free government. This is one of our Sullivan of the farmers and the laboring men, we are going to force upon this Congress, and every Representative and Senator must show the American people where he stands upon this question.' "The resolution will be reported unfavorably," said Mr. Oates, of the judiciary committee, "for the reason that Congress has no power to take away from the States the regulation of this matter. As the chairman of the sub-committee to which this resolution was referred, I called upon Mr. Watson to furnish us with the charter of the Pinkerton agency, so that we might see whether its regulation was something within the granting of power to Congress or whether we had the right to legislate upon it. If we have no right to legislate upon it, then, in my opinion, we have no right to inquire into it. Mr. Watson was unable to furnish us with any evidence or arguments showing that we had a right to legislate upon the matter. I do not believe in making an intering motions, might nullify the will of vestigation of a subject concerning which Congress has no power to legislate. In the case of Kilbourne and Thompson, some years ago, the Supreme Court decided that Kilbourne was entitled to damages because of false imprisonment for refusing to answer questions before the investigating committee. They decided that it was false imprisonment because the subject investigated was one over which Congress had no control, and in which it had not the power to legislate. I think that Mr. Watson's resolution covers an analogous case, and that we could not compel the attendance of witnesses in the Pinkerton investiga-tion because the regulation of those detective agencies is a subject on which we could not legislate. Such legislation, if any be necessary, should be made by the various States. In our report of this resolution to the House we will state fully our reasons for opposing the investigation."

Southern Loyalty. Chicago Inter Ocean. "Although you can hardly expect the people of the South to fall in love with a Republican administration," said John W. Murphy, of Memphis, Tenn., "the Southerners have stood up for Harrison almost to a man in this Chilian controversy. Our position is in favorable contrast to that of some of the Democrats of the Northern and border States. The Southern press indorsed for the most part the action of the administration, and had war actually resuited there would have been no lack of volunteers from the South. The truth is that the South actually hoped for war that it might prove its loyalty. I do not think the action of Breckinridge will commend itself to Tennesseeans or citizens of the gulf States, and I think all the people of this region will feel nothing but contempt for those Northern Democrats who have antagonized President Harrison, and in doing so have reflected little credit upon their own patriotism and sense of honor.

minor details of the settlement, the firm and statesmanlike course of the administration in this matter is amply vindicated, and the President of the United States is entitled to the patriotic thanks of his countrymen for the decided attitude he took at the outset of the difficulty, and the courage and consistency with which he has maintained his position. With him there was a great and vital principle at stake, nothing less than the honor and dignity of the Nation. In the assertion and defense of this principle he has allowed no mercenary considerations to interfere, no mercenary considerations to interfere, no pleas of peace upon any terms to have weight, no private commercial interests to sway him from a lofty sense of duty. The result, if the result be really reached, is a splendid triumph of American diplomacy, of American rights, of American justice, of a truly American policy. It is not always the greatest victories that are wrought with shot and shell.

The Twelfth District Convention.

To the Editor of the Indianapoils Journal: The Fort Wayne Gazette, commenting on the action of the district convention held at Auburn on the 21st inst., says: "To harmonize matters, the Harrison men agreed that if the resolution indorsing the administration of President Harrison should be allowed to pass, there would be no contest over the election of district chairman." nated with the Steuben county delegation, and was submitted to delegates and friends from other counties. I gave a copy to one of the advance guard of the Allen county delegation. He asked me if it was intended as a threat to the Allen county delegates, and I told him it was not. He then, and a number of the delegates from the county afterwards, asked me if our delegation would support Mr. Hanns for district chairman if they would support the resolution. I told each and all that we would not make any bargain in regard to the matter; that the resolution must stand or fall on its merits. The resolution was unani-mously adopted. The Steuben county delegation, in seconding the nomination of Mr. Hanna for district chairman and then moving that he be elected by acclamation. did so because they recognized his fitness for the position, and they repudiate the imputation that it was the result of any bargain or sale of any kind whatever. No pledge was asked or given by Mr. Hanna, and no promise was made by us to induce any person to vote for the resolution. Our support of the resolution and the candidacy of Mr. Hanna was a free-will offering to both-one to the masterful administration of the affairs of a great nation by a distinguished citizen of this State; the other to the capabilities of a man who, we believe, will render efficient aid in organizing victory in November.
